

AUTO STRIKES CULVERT; TWO INJURED

LOOSE GRAVEL BLAMED FOR SERIOUS CRASH

Loose gravel on the highway near the Louis Lauffer farm east of Mokena caused a serious accident Wednesday night when a car driven by Robert Schultdt of Tinley Park skidded and sideswiped the car driven by Elmer Nelson of Mokena while Schultdt was trying to pass Nelson.

The impact threw the Schultdt car against a concrete culvert abutment. The car overturned. Robert Schultdt who was driving the car sustained three broken ribs and other injuries. Vernon Brandau also of Tinley Park who was riding with Schultdt sustained a deep cut on the right arm, necessitating 5 stitches to close, and suffered other cuts and bruises.

The injured were taken to the office of Dr. R. Carmichael in Tinley Park and after receiving first aid treatment were taken home.

Mr. Nelson luckily escaped injury.

The Schultdt car, a Willys Knight, was very badly smashed and the Nelson car was also quite badly damaged.

Deputy Sheriff Wm. Knippel of Frankfort township was notified of the accident and had the wrecked car removed. The Nelson car was towed to the Nelson farm.

Tinley Woman Badly Burned When Clothes Become Ignited

Mrs. Edyth McCullough, piano teacher, residing in the south Elmore Subdivision in Tinley Park, was painfully burned late Tuesday when burning garbage at her home.

A sudden puff of flame ignited a loose smock she was wearing and in almost an instant she was enveloped in flames. She tore off some of the blazing clothing but was unable to get the blaze out.

Oscar Olson, clerking at the Vogt Dept., Store was driving the store delivery truck near the McCullough place and saw Mrs. McCullough's predicament. He tore off the rest of the burning clothes and secured first aid for Mrs. McCullough who suffered third degree burns about the body and her hands. She has been confined to her bed since.

If Mr. Olson had not appeared just at the critical moment, Mrs. McCullough might have been burned to death, as she was alone when the accident occurred.

Frisch, Hugh Tierney, "Red Hughes" and Rene Guindon, captain of the group, got in the dog house staying out late. The boys are looking forward to another big shivaree.

A Fish Yarn

BY THE OFFICE BOY

Well sir, you've guessed it! I've got another fish story, and to top it all off the same fellow is responsible for it as was responsible for most of the yarns about fishing that have been swimming around these parts from time to time. It is Baron Munchausen Larson, Morry to you, folks.

Well, he and a party of fellows went way up in Canada, though I don't know why, to do some plain and fancy fishing! It took them about a week to go each way so that cut their fishing time down to zero minutes and no seconds. But you know how Morry is. He came back with a big smile on his face and told of the big strings they caught and how he had shipped the fish on ahead to Joliet! Imagine his embarrassment when he got home to find that he forgot to put the fish in ice and they had all spoiled.

I'll admit that this fish story does smell kind of bad. But next week Morry and I are going fishing in a gold fish bowl somewhere, so I can SEE him really catch a fish.

Flower Show At Tinley Park Opens Sept. 7

This is the last invitation to the Tinley Park community to enter fruit, flowers and vegetables in the Fall Fiesta and flower show to be held in the Tinley Park school auditorium by the Tinley Park Garden Club on Thursday, September 7th. Any exhibitor can enter in as many classes as they wish, but only one entry in each class.

The theme of the show will represent a Mexican market street filled with many interesting things, among them a "Potted Patio" where plants in gay colored pots may be purchased as well as many other interesting articles.

In the evening a strumming guitarist will stroll among the flowers. Pupils of Jewel Anderson of Blue Island will dance in costume.

The judges have been chosen from the list of women who are qualified as compiled by the Garden Club of Illinois.

Refreshments will be served. As the date of the Mexican Fiesta and Fall Flower show approaches, September 7, The Tinley Park Garden club is desirous of stimulating interest in the various classes. There is promise of greater enjoyment for exhibitors and the public in the novel ideas which can be effected in a show of this type.

Class No. 1. An effective class which utilizes antique and old fashioned containers.

A distinguished cool arrangement can be entered in class 6. All white. Ornamental gourds may be used in new and different combinations and made unusual by being arranged in picturesque straw hats, small handmade carts and pottery bowls, or platters in class 9.

The addition of sprays of ivy, trailing gourd vines or loose bunches of curled parsley may be used to excellent advantage to offset solidity. This suggestion would apply to class 9 as well.

Leaf arrangements are coming into prominence and many beautiful results are gained by using variegated foliage plants. Class No. 8.

Class No. 13 may suggest moods and emotions and will undoubtedly attract a great deal of attention and excite much comment. Miniature arrangements not to exceed 4 in. over all shadow box dimensions, 6 in. high 4 3-4 wide and 6 in. deep.

New ideas may be developed in small arrangements for bedside table and twin vases for buffet or mantel. Classes 14 and 15.

These timely suggestions are offered so that none of the interesting possibilities of the show will be overlooked. Plan now to add to the attraction and interest of the show by entering as many exhibits as possible. A cordial invitation is extended to anyone who has garden grown flowers, fruits or vegetables. The club will present a prize to the exhibitor gaining the highest total of points.

Admission will be small. The weekly contribution of flowers in charge of Mrs. Hartman totaled 443 bouquets. A big thank you to Mesdames Lillie Bettenhausen, Buchanan, Kehres, J. Funk Wm. Funk, Fulton, Rogers, Mager, Hartman Baldwin, English, Swisher, H. Uthe and Marquardt.

Western Railroads Pioneered the Way, Now Entire Nation Enjoys Fast Trains

America Gets New Thrill From Streamlined and Modernized Flyers; Lines Enjoy Higher Passenger Revenue.

By WILLIAM S. PERKINS
 (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

NEW YORK.—Speeding across Nevada the other night, a glistening, streamlined train struck the rail which a demented saboteur had purposely moved out of position. Twenty died and three score were injured in the ensuing wreck, but this tragedy nevertheless focused a national spotlight on the strides American railroading has made these past few years.

Blazing a pioneer's path across the continent, modernism and speed in rail transportation have caused the public to respond—with cash out of its pocket.

This encouraging state of affairs is indicated by the reception given the lightweight, streamlined unit railroad train and its more frequent encountered step-brother, the "modernized" standard train, as these mile-a-minute innovations of American progress near their fifth year of accomplished fact.

Five years ago there was not a single streamlined train—of either the unit or "modernized" variety—in service on all the quarter-million miles of American railway which make up one-third of the world's total, it appears from statistics issued by the Association of American Railroads.

Today, their rise to popularity has been so meteoric that we accept them as a common fact. And, by the time two all-aluminum streamlined units now being built for Missouri Pacific are delivered, there will be nearly 100.

Just to prove that it pays to give the American people what they want, every streamlined train operating in the United States has in its short lifetime produced additional passenger traffic and substantial earnings for the road placing it in service. Operating records of these trains show that on virtually every railroad on which they have been introduced, their net earnings have been from half to three-quarters of the gross, with the gross earnings rising steadily.

Speed Startles a Nation.

Yet it was not until February 12, 1934, that Americans got their first glimpse of a real "streamliner." That was when Union Pacific's all-aluminum "City of Salina" began its 13,000-mile, nation-wide tour. It seems incredible that citizens of the U. S., better accustomed to speedy train travel than any other inhabitants of the earth, would make up parties to drive down to the tracks and watch the trains go by, but this was the common thing with the advent of the earliest "streamliners." The Burlington's first stainless steel "Zephyr" was completed and went on tour in May of the same year.

Both these streamlined trains were of the unit classification which engendered the real revolution in present day railroad travel. That is to say, engineering principles involving new standards of lightness, speed and safety and thus blazing new trails for the roads to follow, required that the new trains be operated as self-contained units which could not be broken up and interspersed with the old, existing equipment.

Idea Spread Quickly.

Previews of the two pioneer trains at the Century of Progress exposition in Chicago scored an immediate hit that was not to be minimized or denied. And when their success had been demonstrated in actual service by U. P. and Burlington in the winter of 1934-1935, other railroads were quick to take advantage of the obvious appeal to the public taste, and the race was on.

With the western roads leading the pack, more streamlined trains were rushed to completion, trains of both the unit type and the type attained by "modernizing" standard equipment with some streamlined features of design and more attractive and up-to-date decoration, but still built to permit interchange with the older cars on the roads.

Within a year, a total of 13 more streamlined trains in both classifications had been placed in service, to

Streamlined trains have clipped hours, almost days in some cases, from trips that have known schedules virtually stationary for years. They now speed from Chicago to Los Angeles in 39 hours 45 minutes, 17 hours faster than their fleetest predecessors; from Chicago to Kansas City in 7½ hours, and from Chicago to New York in 16. It might be noted here that trains of the unit type are prevalent in the West, while the eastern roads depend more upon the "modernized" version, although this is not always true.

Demonstrate Value of Research.

Streamlined trains are visible proof, railroad officials say, of the ability of industry and research to create new improvements with an appeal to practicability as well as imagination. Especially is this true in the metal industries, which have produced the lightweight aluminum alloys and stainless steel which make the trains of today possible. Aluminum has come into its own on the railroads since they have taken advantage of its lightness combined with strength, durability and economy of maintenance, and employed it to meet today's demands for high speed and increased safety.

Approximately one-third of all the virgin aluminum produced now goes into the transportation field, and the competition between this metal and others such as stainless steel is a first-line skirmish in the "bloody battle of the metals." Union Pacific's huge streamlined fleet is all-aluminum, while Burlington's new trains are built of stainless steel, which likewise has found a ready market in streamlined train development.

Probably in the end all trains will be built neither of aluminum nor of steel, but of both. Even now, every stainless steel train contains some aluminum and every aluminum train uses at least a little steel. Tomorrow all trains will use each metal in the places where that metal's characteristics are most advantageous.

Czech Foreign Legion Reborn, Recalling 1917 Siberian March

PRAGUE.—The Czech foreign legion lives again. Famed for its 5,000-mile trek across Russia and Siberia during the World war, the legion is again carrying Czecho-Slovakia's banner of independence in an under-cover plot to recapture the Fatherland from Germany.

In 1916 Czech troops which deserted to Russia from the Austro-German front were finally forced to flee half-way around the world before they could return home through friendly territory. This time they've deserted to Poland under leadership of a veteran of the Russian trek, Gen. Lev Prchala. There, while the folks back in Czecho-Slovakia watch excitedly, they are drilling 8,000 strong against the day when their homeland can be free.

Last March when Germany marched in, hundreds of Czech army officers and men, some of them with equipment, fled to the vicinity of Cracow, Poland. In the far-eastern Carpatho-Ukraine, Gen. Prchala led his men in a hopeless battle against the Hungarians, a Nazi-Ukrainian organization and a frightened central Prague government. Realizing it was a futile fight, he disbanded his men, sent some to Poland and some to Rumania, and went back to Prague to watch the proceedings. The Czech foreign legion was thus born, and a few weeks later Gen. Prchala joined his men in Poland.

Czech Youths Disappear.

Reliable reports indicate the legion is growing rapidly. From almost every Czech village youths are mysteriously disappearing, crawling through the border and appearing in Cracow a few days later. Each volunteer receives the equivalent of $240. If he brings a Czech plane to Cracow, he gets up to $8,000. Meanwhile, branches of the group are springing up elsewhere. About 4,000 of the Czech soldiers now in Poland are reportedly being transferred to French Morocco. At Sidi Bel Abbes, Algerian headquarters of the French foreign legion, a new regiment composed almost exclusively of Czech army veterans has been organized. In Paris two regiments are reported.

Gen. Lev Prchala, veteran of the Siberian trek, who now commands Czech legionnaires drilling in Poland.

What the legion will ultimately gain by this apparently futile maneuver is hard to visualize. But legionnaires are content merely to try, hoping the day may come when their added strength may turn the tide against Germany in the war they believe is inevitable. On that day, they believe the independent Czecho-Slovakia will be born again.

Cynics suspect President would be pleased if business slumped a little thereby justifying his remarks on failure of congress to pass the spend-lend bill . . . Now Senator Wheeler looms as possibility for the Democratic nomination for President . . . Roosevelt seeks a way to make the administration the leader in the improvement in business.

WASHINGTON.—There are some people so cynical that they suspect President Roosevelt would be pleased if business did slump a little, or at least fail to continue the pickup which has been in progress, so as to justify his sharp comments on the failure of congress to pass the spend-lend bill.

Perhaps the worst feature of the situation is that there are plenty of business men and investors who agree heartily with the President as to the effects on the country's buying power of this eleventh hour retrenchment drive by congress.

Plenty of argument is being made on the other side, those holding this view citing two important factors. The first is that actually the appropriations of the session of congress just closed were not small. Actually they were more than a billion dollars in excess of those of the previous session. The second factor is some recent reports, one from the New York employment agency, indicating that despite this feeling on the part of the President, and the gloomy agreement with his views on the part of many business men, employment by private capital is on the increase, whether it is sufficient to take up the slack or not.

This last factor was rather curiously demonstrated by a Harry Hopkins department of commerce report showing business improvement. The timing of this report caused considerable amusement in Washington, as it was published on the front pages of many newspapers in juxtaposition with the gloomy statements of the President.

Should Stop Feeding Out Pessimistic Propaganda

But assuming that Mr. Roosevelt does want business recovery to continue, and that he would be distressed to have his gloomy forebodings sustained, there is one thing he certainly ought to do. This is to give peremptory orders to the federal reserve board to stop feeding out pessimistic propaganda by the back door.

Various lieutenants of Marriner S. Eccles have caused much more pessimism in New York and Washington by their "confidential" comments to their personal friends among stock brokers and market operators than did the President's own statement. The trouble here is that these reserve board attaches convince the very people who are generally disposed to "copper" anything the President says.

As a result a great many persons who might be making investments or buying securities have been holding off. There is no doubt about the accuracy of this. A canvass either in New York or any other city boasting a financial center will disclose fears of the business situation which can be traced directly to pessimistic views expressed privately to this or that banker or broker by some official of the federal reserve board.

Wheeler a Possibility as Nominee for President

If candidates for the Democratic nomination for President were going to run like horses in the derby, it would not be a bad idea to put a little money on Sen. Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, for "show."

For the Democratic sweepstakes next June the odds-on favorite is still Franklin D. Roosevelt, the second choice is John Nance Garner and the horse that didn't even look as if it were going to get away from the starting post, just a little while back, Wheeler, is now in third position and going strong. The really important point is that this recent spurt of Wheeler has resulted in his passing Paul V. McNutt, and for significant reasons.

Six months ago Wheeler scoffed at the idea he might be nominated and would carefully explain to admirers just why the then political setup made it impossible. The key log in this setup, as Wheeler's friends then understood it, was that Roosevelt would never accept Wheeler as a "compromise" candidate.

Since that time Roosevelt has poured a lot of oil on the Montana senator. He has sent for him again and again, first on the railroad legislation but gradually on other things. Examination of the list of

White House appointments—which are made public every day—for the period from February to the adjournment of congress, will show a perfectly astonishing number of talks between the two.

Montana Senator Plays Ball and Keeps His Word

Many of us in Washington have believed since the fight to enlarge the Supreme court, in which Wheeler was made the leader against the President, that Roosevelt would never forgive him. Some of us still believe that. We simply cannot remember any other man who has fought Roosevelt and been forgiven and we find it difficult to conceive of his doing it in Wheeler's case. But we may be wrong. Whatever one may think of Wheeler, he is very likable personally as well as a forceful character. He plays ball and keeps his word. He seldom promises anything that he cannot deliver. His judgment as to what can or cannot be done is excellent.

Roosevelt has not found many among those whom he has actively liked since he entered the White House who have possessed all those qualities. For instance, Senators Sherman Minton of Indiana, and Joe Guffey of Pennsylvania, who were as enthusiastic about the "purge" as Tommy Corcoran and Ben Cohen. For instance, the great Marathon orator, whom the President made Democratic leader of the senate, Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky.

So it just may be that next June, if the President discovers he cannot nominate a man who agrees with him 100 per cent, he might turn to Wheeler rather than see the nomination of someone eager to tear down more of the New Deal than Wheeler. Always assuming of course that Roosevelt is not nominated himself.

It must be remembered that Wheeler has been so liberal for years that some have called him a Communist, that he was one of the most active of the "For Roosevelt Before Chicago" club, and that despite the fact that the White House ignored him on patronage in favor of his bitter political enemy, J. Bruce Kremer, Wheeler never opposed the President on any important issue until the Supreme court battle.

Incidentally both Garner and Jim Farley are friendly to Wheeler.

President Seeks Credit for Improvement in Business

Improvement of business despite defeat of the spend-lend bill, bumper crops on top of carry-overs and big crops abroad, and the obvious intention of the G. O. P.-Conservative Democrat coalition to upset more New Deal apple carts when congress meets next January—all these are spurring Franklin D. Roosevelt to develop a new theme. Call it new rabbits from new hats, if you like, but what the President needs is something to bring about three things:

1.—Make the administration the leader in the improvement of business—in other words, get the credit, thus upsetting the picture now that the improvement is in spite of the New Deal.

2.—Divert Capitol Hill from its conservative course toward undoing New Deal reforms by giving congress something new to fight over—but not at the risk of another major defeat on the eve of the national conventions and the election campaign.

3.—Work out some bigger and better way of handling the farm surplus and low farm price situation. Not necessarily, for example, letting prices slide away down to encourage consumption and exports, and compensating the farmers directly by AAA checks, but something as radical as that.

If Roosevelt can produce formulas for these three problems, he may have the political bear by a nose-ring instead of by the tail next winter.

Watch for Another Fireside Chat or Big Set Speech

So when the President gets round to another fireside chat, or has to make a big set speech on some occasion this fall, it will probably be the most interesting of anything he has ever made, and this is no reflection whatever on the importance of many of his former speeches and fireside chats. In the very nature of things the President, being distinctly on the defensive at the moment, is almost sure to follow old military strategy and take the offensive. But he must take it so spectacularly that he will get the country talking about what's new, rather than what happened a little while back.

There is another difficulty in his problem, which would be plenty hard without it. The additional hurdle is that Roosevelt is a very stubborn man, a man who hates to admit defeat, as evidenced by his recent reference to the Supreme court packing battle.

So Roosevelt will find himself anxious to inject into his new theme, whatever form it may take, some tying in with the old battles. He wants vindication on his advocacy of the spend-lend bill that congress rejected. He wants vindication on the neutrality program that he demanded and that congress turned down.

Regarding this last, everything depends upon what happens in Europe. It may easily be that events in Europe will convince the country, long before congress meets again, that the President was right.

Kay responded to this mood of the old Barney.

"Where are we going?" she asked. "Mostly out."

"When?"

"Practically immediately. What say?"

"It doesn't look as though I'm being consulted."

"You're not. Uncle Barney has set himself the task of lifting you out of this here slough of despond."

Her lips expanded into a smile. "Do you really feel that way, Barney—or are you just acting?"

"I feel it. I'm tired of being sad."

She regarded him affectionately. He was acting, of course, but doing a gallant job of it. She said, "I'll be glad to get out of the house."

"It's my prescription. The chariot waits without. Without gas, mebbe."

She rose. "I'll get my hat and coat..." She moved upstairs and Mrs. Forrest entered the room. Barney said, "I'm taking Kay for a ride."

"That'll be nice. She's been sticking too close to the house. Looks a bit peaky."

"She'll snap out of it."

He was waiting at the foot of the steps when Kay came down. She kissed her mother dutifully on the cheek and followed him to the curb. They drove slowly through town and stopped at Warner's Sudden Service Garage, where Andy worked, to buy gas. They chatted for a moment or two before Barney drove across the railroad tracks and turned right.

Kay asked, "Where are we going?"

"You guessed it, honey. I wonder if you realize that you haven't been to the Gardens for more than a week."

"But Barney—"

He smiled down at her. "This is lesson number one in Snapping Out of Something, or, What Every Girl Should Do. You've been letting yourself slip and I'm the fair-haired boy with the anti-slip formula. So what?"

She said, "I haven't wanted to ramble around the streets of Beverly."

"Quite naturally. It's not such a much town anyway. But driving in the country... well, that's different. As a dose of tonic it's good, taken three times a day, it's darn near perfect."

She said, "It's nice—being out with you, this way, instead of sitting at home."

Kay found the visit amazingly easy. When she and Barney were in the car again, moving slowly toward Beverly, she said, "You win."

"Win what?"

"Most anything. I had been dreading a trip to the Gardens. Now I feel better."

"Atta gal! Cross your year?"

"I promise."

"Then," he said, with a note of seriousness in his voice, "perhaps I can do a bit of talking."

"What about?"

"Us."

"Yes...?"

"Don't let me get too serious. I aim to remain Yours truly, the Gay Lad from the Gardens."

"You'll succeed."

"Maybe so, and maybe not. It just happens that when I start making love to you, laughter vanishes. In fact, I get all hot and bothered."

She played up to his mood. She said, "I can't be sorry about that."

"Intriguing gal! Keep the home fires burning—please, because I'm liable to go mushy on you."

"The pleasure," she said, "would be all mine."

"That's that, then. So to the business of this meeting. Mister Hamilton has the floor. Question: Why haven't I asked you to marry me immediately and at once?"

She drew in her breath, sharply. She said, "Barney... please..."

"I'm talking. And I'll answer my own question. First, it isn't because I don't love you. Actually, I'm so completely nuts that I don't know which ear I'm standing on. But honey..." His voice was tender...

"Honey, let me lay off the kidding for a moment. What I'm going to say might hurt a little..."

"You don't have to say anything..."

"I do. Really." All banter was gone now. "I want to marry you, right now. But if I did... Oh! don't you see what people would say?"

"What, dear?"

"That it was a repetition of the other marriage. That you were marrying me so that you couldn't testify against me."

She was silent, staring off into the starlight night. Save for their own little car the road was deserted.

He said, "I'm taking an awful lot for granted, Kay. I'm taking it for granted that you still feel as you used to feel..."

"You know I do, Barney."

"So you must see what I'm driving at. Let's not hide what we're thinking. Everybody in Beauregard County thinks that I killed Kirk Reynolds... or, at least, that I might have. Isn't that true?"

"Yes."

"They know why he was coming out that night. They know that we're pretty fond of each other. If we married, they'd start talking all over again. They'd say that I not only killed Kirk but that you saw me do it. The analogy would be too deadly. We'd never really get away from it."

She was tense again, her brain racing. She asked, "Did you kill him?"

"No. I've told you that over and over."

"Then who did?"

He shook his head. "I don't know. But I didn't." He touched her hand. "You want to believe me, but you can't... isn't that it?"

"Perhaps..."

"Some day," he said, "this whole mess will clear up. They'll find out who did kill Kirk. Then we'll both be free. Will you marry me then?"

"Whenever you say."

CHAPTER XII

Kay volunteered to go downtown. It wasn't an easy decision and she shrank from the inescapable staring and the behind-her-back comments:

"There's Kay Forrest..." "First time she's been out since Kirk's funeral..." "She looks kind of drug out..."

The new chintz curtains furnished the excuse for the step which Kay knew must be taken sooner or later. Mrs. Forrest offered to accompany her, but Kay said no. She preferred to walk downtown alone. This time. Then the next time would be easier; her life would be one degree closer to normal. But she was startled when a car pulled up alongside the curb and a man's voice said, "Maw'nin' Kay."

She looked up into the quizzical, kindly eyes of Lee Mangin, judge of probate for Beauregard County. She said, "Good morning, Judge."

The little old man cut off his motor and lowered his voice. "I was kind of cravin' to talk to you a little, Kay."

"Yes, sir..."

Judge Mangin was not entirely at ease. "It's about somethin' that's been a-worryin' me." He looked around as though fearful of being overheard. "It's about Kirk Reynolds' estate."

A tiny frown appeared briefly on Kay's forehead. "What about it?" she inquired.

"We-e-ell... it's this way, Kay. Kirk Reynolds didn't leave no kin hereabouts, and nobody ain't made application to administer his estate. We know he left some money and it's all tied up in the bank, and you bein' his wife—"

"I wasn't really his wife, Judge. You know that."

"Sho' I do, honey. But that don't alter the fact that you two was legally married, so you're nearest of kin and entitled to part of it, anyway. Maybe all. Now I was thinkin' that if you filed application—as his widow—"

She shook her head as he left. "I don't want any of his money, Judge—so I can't do that."

And then an idea came to her—an idea so impulsively generous that for the first time in weeks she experienced a thrill of happiness. Here at last was something she could do, something essentially right emerging from a background of so many wrongs.

She reached Monument Square and circled it. She entered the White Star Hotel for the first time since the fateful night of the dance which she had attended as Kirk's guest. She ignored the approving glances of the lobby loungers and tried to appear unaware of the hum of gossip. She went straight to the little door with the gold-lettered inscription:

MISS SONIA HENKEL
Beautician

The room was empty save for the long, slender figure of Babe seated in a white enamel chair and toying aimlessly with a nail-file. They were the direct antithesis of each other, these two girls—one impulsively eager; the other coolly calculating.

Babe Henkel did not rise when Kay entered the room. Her long eyes narrowed and tiny spots of natural color appeared beneath the makeup. The nail-file bent into an arc with additional pressure, and her husky voice was hostile. She said, "What do you want?"

Surprisingly, Kay did not resent the fierce antagonism. She was deeply sorry for Babe, and so she advanced bravely, hazel eyes meeting black ones without animosity.

"I want to talk to you, Miss Henkel. About a personal matter."

"Well, I don't want to talk to you. So get out."

"Please... This is important."

"Well..."

"It's about Kirk Reynolds' estate."

Babe's hands were clasped around the nail-file. Her cheeks were white now, save for their spots of artificial color. Her manner was unyielding. She asked, "What about it?"

Kay was finding the situation difficult. She struggled bravely. "The probate judge says that Kirk left some money in the bank. He said something about it being mine because—well, because—"

"Skip it!"

"Anyway, I don't want it."

"Afraid you'll dirty your hands?" Babe's words cut deep.

"That isn't it. You know it isn't. I came here to suggest that it really should go to you."

Babe rose. Her long, shapely hands rested on rounded hips. She leaned forward, eyes blazing with anger.

"What's the big idea? Throwing bones to a dog?"

Suddenly Kay was not nervous. She was more mature, more sure of herself. She spoke with quiet, effective dignity. She said, "I'm sorry you're taking it this way..."

"I'll take it any way I please. And get this, You, I don't like you butting into my affairs."

It was not until Kay reached home that she realized she had forgotten to buy the chintz curtains.

Every Tuesday afternoon seven New York Sunday newspapers are received in Beverly. One copy goes to the White Star Hotel, one to the Elite Barber Shop, one to Mrs. Diana Guinn and three travel, via R. F. D., to plantations near Chicora.

The seventh copy goes to Red Williams' Bon Ton Pool Room.

On this particular Tuesday afternoon the pictorial section fell into the hands of a stalwart young man named Ernie Watts. Mr. Watts, being of limited education, bothered not at all with those sections of the New York paper which were devoted to the printed word, but he reveled in pictures... and today he retired into a corner and turned the pages idly.

Suddenly his feet came down to the floor from the chair upon which they had been perched. Mr. Watts said, very loudly, "Hey Fellers—looka heah!"

Mr. Williams was staring with unusual interest, not untinctured by excitement, at a solid page of art photography. These pictures, delicate in tone and texture and distinctive for their composition, were on a page bearing the caption:

CATHEDRAL GARDENS
Photographic Studies
By Christine Maynard

Mr. Watts exclaimed, "Dam' if Jeff Butler wasn't tellin' the truth. That's Kay Forrest sho' nuff."

Then somebody called, "Yonder she goes now."

All eyes turned toward the window. They caught a brief glimpse of Kay, who was seated beside Barney Hamilton in the front seat of his car. In the rear seat were Margaret Hamilton and Jim Owenby, and they were headed east. Supper at the Gardens... and Kay's face was bright and alive and beautiful. One pool-room loafer said, with forced humor, "She can't fool us no mo'. We know what she really looks like."

Mr. Ernie Watts was chuckling. He had a distorted sense of humor and a rather reckless courage. He produced a small pocket-knife and commenced to slice into the page of pictures. A howl of protest arose, but Ernie raised his hand. "You-all wait," he said, "this'll be funny."

With meticulous care he cut from the paper a particularly impressive photographic study: the one in which the beauty of Kay's figure was best revealed. He pasted this on the big plate-glass front window. Then he took the little pot of white paint... the one Red Williams used for decorating his inside mirror with such inscriptions as: All Sandwiches—10 cents... and went outside, followed by a gaping and admiring crowd.

Ernie Watts was no lettering artist, but his intentions were unmistakable and his execution clear enough. Over the picture of the Gardens—and of Kay—he daubed a few words:

Home Town Gal Makes Good!
And How!

This was regarded by the assembled young men as the high watermark of Beverly humor. They declared vociferously that Ernie was the funniest guy! Always making up jokes. Mr. Watts was exceedingly well pleased with himself and for almost a half-hour he loafed near the front window enjoying the startled expressions which appeared on the countenances of casual pedestrians who paused to glance at this unusual display. Then Mr. Watts drifted toward his home.

In the dining-room of the little house out on Chicora Avenue, young Andy Forrest was finishing an early supper. Mr. Forrest was reading in the living-room, Mrs. Forrest pressed more cold chicken upon her son and declared she was sorry he had undertaken this night-shift. She was quite positive that one hour of sleep at night was worth two hours in the daytime, and seemed assured that Andy's health would eventually be ruined. He laughed at her fears as he rose from the table, stated that he never felt better in his life (a statement which his appearance verified), called good night to his father and walked through the front door and toward town.

When he reached the Bon Ton Pool Room a white-lettered inscription caught his eye. A frown appeared on his forehead and he stepped closer, inspecting the picture with the aid of the corner arclight.

Andy was a placid sort of a person. His reactions were usually slow and almost never violent. He had known few moments of real ecstasy and fewer of bitter anger.

Even now there was little indication of the deadly fury that boiled within him. His cheeks were white, but his step was steady and not too fast. He shoved his broad shoulders through the front door. Pool-games stopped. Within the Bon Ton there was an air of hushed expectancy, and more than a trifle of apprehension.

He did not raise his voice. He made no gestures. But in unmistakable and very profane language he expressed his opinion of the man who had pasted that picture on the window—and of the crowd which had gloated over it and left it there. He flung them with his fury. And his scorn.

"Who ever it was is yellow, too," he said, "or he'd admit it."

Nobody moved. Andy said, "Who was it?"

Still no answer.

"I'll find out sooner or later," stated Andy. "And when I do..."

Somebody said, whiningly, "It wasn't me, Andy."

"You wouldn't have the guts to admit it if it was."

"But listen..."

"To hell with the whole gang of you. And I'll tell you one more thing, if anything like that happens again, I'll kill somebody."

One of the hangers-on, more courageous than the rest—perhaps because he stood near the back door—said, "You better not be threatenin' the feller that did that, Andy Forrest."

"Why not?"

"'Cause he's mean."

"Yeah? Just tell me who it was and I'll show you how mean he is."

The tall man said, "He'll find out what you called him."

"That suits me fine."

The other man said, "That's what you think. But you better watch out."

Andy left. His face was chalky and he walked swiftly toward the garage. Behind him—in the Bon Ton Pool Room—there was a chorus of sigh. Somebody said, "Are you goin' to tell Ernie Watts what Andy called him?"

The tall man near the door nodded.

"I sho' am," he announced. "An' then you'll see somethin'. Ernie Watts don't take that off nobody."

4-H Club

Hello Folks!

Did you know that the Sunshine 4-H gang of about thirty girls and boys had a picnic last Sunday?

The weather was perfect and base ball was the order of the day with Keuch and Steinborn as captains. They all thought Captain Keuch's side didn't have a chance because she had the most girls, but they proved they could hit a ball and run bases. One girl even lost her heel. Some excitement when Gary the 3rd baseman found a poor little frog and threatened the girls with it. Here's a bouquet to Steinborn's excellent pitcher who made many a one strike out. After the game ice cream was enjoyed by all and a wiener roast was held to top off the day. Most of the group gathered in the evening at the Niemeyer home for a gay time which is enough to turn anyone's hair white when the hat you put on has talcum powder in it, eh Laura?

Wonder why a certain somebody couldn't find that missing bottle when it really was in plain sight. The cake we ate was delicious. Wonder if the boys baked it.

Three cheers for Melvin who entertained us with music on the accordion. We all departed at an early (?) hour feeling the day had been a perfect one.

Moken Garden Club Reports on Flower Show

Well folks, we members of the Mokena Garden club have taken a few deep breaths since last week's rush and anticipation are past and even though all those beautiful flowers have withered by this time, we will all remember the gorgeous blooms and beautiful arrangements for a long time to come. We do not want to exaggerate and therefore rather quote the judges of the flower show who said: "Your arrangements are so varied in form and color combination, and such distinct originality is shown that we must class your entire exhibition as a very outstanding one."

We also want to thank Mrs. Allen and Mrs. Thornberg of New Lenox township who directed the play presented at the flower show which was called "That Awful Letter." The cast certainly showed fine coaching and fine talent. All those who participated in the program are eighth grade students of the Gaugar school of New Lenox township. Their names are as follows:

Joyce Allen, Mary Ann Allen, Irene Gilkerson, Louis Sergeant, Dorothy Walker and Robert Walker played between intermissions. Dorothy Rowe played the piano.

We also want to express our appreciation to the school directors who were kind enough to let us use the spacious auditorium of our school. We would not have been able to have our outdoor living room had Mr. J. Oswald not been kind and generous enough to lend us the cement blocks and the artificial grass.

We certainly appreciate his kindness and effort. Mrs. B. Swanson and Mrs. Rabinov were the lucky ones in the drawing of the stainless steel kettle and roaster. The door prize was received by Mrs. Clepper of Tinley Park.

Rusk Takes Post as U. I. Head of Agriculture and Home Economics

PROF. HENRY PERLY RUSK

An Illinois farm boy who has come to be recognized as one of the country's leading livestock authorities takes over the reins of the College of Agriculture, University of Illinois, September 1, when Prof. Henry Perly Rusk succeeds Dean and Director J. C. Blair.

The latter will become dean and director emeritus after 43 years service to the university and to the state. He started the college's department of horticulture 39 years ago and has served as its head ever since in addition to being dean and director since June, 1938.

Formerly head of the department of animal husbandry, Prof. Rusk becomes dean of the College of Agriculture, director of the agricultural experiment station and director of the extension service in agriculture and home economics. He has been a member of the staff for 29 years and is fourth in the line of the college's chief executives.

The several branches of the college's work which he will administer reach into every county of the state and touch all the major problems of a higher level of rural living.

The new dean and director was born on a farm near Rankin, July 19, 1894, the son of William H. and Anna L. (Renner) Rusk. He was graduated from Valparaiso University, Valparaiso, Ind., in 1914. Four years later, his family having moved to Missouri, he was graduated from the College of Agriculture, University of Missouri, Columbia, with the degree of bachelor of science. Three years later he received his master of science degree from that institution.

Before coming to Illinois Prof. Rusk had served a year each at the University of Missouri and at Purdue University, West Lafayette, Ind., as an animal husbandryman. He joined the Illinois staff in 1910 as associate in beef cattle husbandry and after a number of promotions was made head of the department of animal husbandry in September, 1922, succeeding the late Herbert W. Mumford, who was made dean and director.

The American Society of Animal Production, leading scientific and educational organization of the livestock industry, selected Prof. Rusk as president in 1926 after he had served one year as vice-president. He also is a member of the division of biology and agriculture of the National Research Council and has served as an officer of cattle feeders' organizations both in Indiana and Illinois.

His reputation as cattle judge is nationwide. He has been and continues to serve as a beef cattle judge at the most important state fairs, the Kansas City American Royal Livestock Exposition and the Chicago International Live Stock Exposition, as well as at many local fairs. He also is a farmer and stockman in his own right, having land holdings which give him first-hand contact with agricultural problems.

The new dean and director is active in educational and public affairs, being a member of a number of fraternal and scientific societies and civic clubs. He has two daughters, both graduates of the University of Illinois.

Many Apply For Farm Loans

Will County farmers are keeping the local Farm Security Administration office employees busy these days inquiring about the recently announced Tenant Purchase program under which loans are made to tenant farmers for the purchase of land. Mr. Geuther, who is in charge of the office in Joliet, advised today that applications for these loans are to be taken until August 31.

Mr. Geuther emphasized the point that all tenant farmers in the county are eligible to make application, although the amount of money available this year will limit the number of actual loans that can be made.

"Each applicant," Mr. Geuther stated, "will receive careful consideration by the local committee." This committee composed of three Will County farmers, works with the Farm Security Administration representatives in making selections

ISAIAH: A LIFE DEDICATED TO GOD

LESSON TEXT—Isaiah 6:1-13.
GOLDEN TEXT—Here am I; send me.—Isaiah 6:8.

Crisis! We have had so many of them that they have almost become commonplace. There has been one war crisis after another. There have been world crisis and domestic crisis until the word has almost lost its meaning.

In the life of the individual, however, the times of crisis are very real and important. In a critical illness one knows when the crisis comes, and he who safely passes that hour is on the road to recovery. More vital than a physical crisis is a spiritual crisis, when a man meets God face to face and his future destiny is determined by the response which he makes to God's call. Isaiah had such an experience when he came to realize God's glory, confessed his own unworthiness, and sought cleansing of life as a preparation for commission to service.

I. "I Saw the Lord" (vv. 1-4).

King Uzziah, who had begun well but had forgotten God, was at the end of his life, a leper because of his sin, and dying in disgrace. Israel which had known unprecedented prosperity under God's blessing now hardened its heart nationally against God and was also about to go into eclipse. God needed a man to speak for Him in such an hour, to bring to His people a message of judgment and also of blessed invitation. To prepare that man, the great Isaiah, God gave a remarkable manifestation of His glory and power.

It is essential that the man who speaks for God should first see the Lord high and lifted up and to hear of His holiness and glory. The negative tone of the present-day message, the lack of enthusiasm and interest in holy things, the low standards of personal holiness, the failure to preach boldly the truth regarding God's holy standards are to be explained by the fact that there has been no vision of the eternal holiness and glory of God. The need of the people today is the same as it was in the time of Isaiah. Where are the men and women who are ready for a vision like his and for the commission which will follow?

II. "Woe Is Me! for I Am Un-done" (v. 5).

To see the holiness of God is to be immediately conscious of one's own sin and unworthiness. The obvious conclusion which one draws from that fact is that anyone who is proud, who is not concerned about his own sins and the sins of his people, is living far from God and has either never known or has forgotten about His divine holiness.

Isaiah spoke of the pollution of his lips, thereby confessing that his heart was not right. Whereof the heart is full, thereof speaketh the mouth, for we read in Matthew 12:34 that out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh. Remember that even though Isaiah was a believer he recognized the need of cleansing.

III. "Then . . . He Touched My Mouth" (vv. 6, 7, R. V.).

"Then" — what an important word! When Isaiah called out in humble confession, "then" he was cleansed. The turning point is right at that place for any life. Only when we come to the place of confession and contrition which Isaiah knew, can we expect the Lord to send the cleansing fire and the enabling power.

None but God can give this cleansing. Man is unable to wash himself clean. "For though thou wash thee with nitre, and take thee much soap, yet thine iniquity is marked before me, saith the Lord" (Jer. 2:22. See also Jer. 13:23). Reformation, turning over a new leaf, character development, all commendable in their place, are not sufficient. There must be divine cleansing of the life if there is to be a commission to service.

IV. "Here Am I; Send Me" (vv. 8-13).

God had a difficult and unpopular message to be delivered but now He had a man who was ready to carry it. Isaiah had to proclaim to Israel that because they had turned from the sunshine of God's love, which would have melted their hard hearts, it had for them become the sunshine of His wrath, which could only progressively harden them and turn them from Him. The same sunshine that melts the wax hardens the mud.

The work of God in our day awaits the man or the woman of vision—the one who has been prepared by confession and cleansing and who has then received the divine commission.

Faith

Of all the forces at the disposal of humanity, faith has always been one of the most tremendous, and the gospel rightly attributes to it the power of moving mountains.

'Swing Style' Reading Not New; The Greeks Had a Word for It

Every now and then, the newspapers report a "brand new" idea or a "brand new" discovery. Take, for instance, the report about "swing reading." According to recent headlines, "swing reading" is the latest thing imaginable—the invention of two smart eye doctors in Los Angeles.

As the papers say, the doctors disclosed their "idea" a short time ago at a national convention of the American Optometric association. Advocating a new system of printing in "swing style," the doctors said they had something that would help the eyes. In short, they urged this type of thing:

Many of the convention delegates a rof snoisses dennuhs yadreysey day on the golf course. The weath-enif saw re along the next, and so on.

Well, we don't like to make ourselves seem scholarly, but the doctors have unwittingly dug up something pretty old. As a matter of fact, the ancient Greeks had a word for it, used the system and gave it up. They called it boustrophedon, and you can find the word in a good dictionary even to this day. Pronounced boos-tro-fee-don, with the accent on the third syllable, it means literally "turning like oxen in plowing." It is a compound of two Greek words—bous, meaning ox, and strephein, meaning to turn.

P. S. Incidentally, the excerpt quoted above reads normally this way: "Many of the convention delegates yesterday shunned sessions for a day on the golf course. The weather was fine."

Anybody else got a new idea?—Pathfinder.

Finally Name Was O. K. Though Not 'O,' but 'K'

A gentleman had completed his purchases, and the clerk, in filling out the sales slip, asked:

"What is the name, please?"

"Jepson," replied our hero. "Sixteen twenty-one West—"

"Your first initial, please."

"Oh, K."

"O. K. Jepson."

"I said 'Oh.'"

"O. Jepson."

"No. Rub out the O."

The clerk began to look haggard.

"Your initials again, please?"

"I said 'K.'"

"Pardon, you said 'O. K.'"

"I said 'Oh.'"

"Just now you said 'K.'"

"I said 'Oh,' because I didn't understand what you were asking me. I didn't mean it was my initial. My name is Kirby Jepson."

"Oh."

"No. Not O, but K. Here, give me the pencil and I'll write it myself. There, I guess it's O. K. now."—Annapolis Log.

NOT EVEN TRYING

At a county fair in the Old Country five pounds was offered to the person who could guess the weight of a certain cow. Many people tried their skill, and various weights were suggested. Finally Old Garge, not-too-bright farm hand, came forward. To their amazement, he named the exact weight of the cow offhand.

"How did you do it?" asked the judge, after awarding the prize.

"Twarn't nothin'," replied the man. "I'd 'a' done better'n that if I'd been tryin'."

Sew a Bag to Keep Your Ball of Twine In

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

WHEN you want to wrap a package do you always know where to find twine? A ball of it in a bag like this one hung over the kitchen table will be ready for use. After trying this you are sure to want to make some of these twine bags to sell at the next bazaar or to use as gifts. Scraps from your piece bag may be used in this way. The bag is just big enough to cover the ball loosely and is made of a straight piece of goods with the ends seamed together with a French seam. The top and bottom are bound with prepared bias binding. A single cord is run through the binding at the bottom. It is drawn up to leave a small opening and the ends are tied and sewn securely. Two cords are run through the top with a loop of each cord left on the outside so that the bag may be drawn up by pulling them. The ball of twine is placed inside with the end running through the bottom opening ready for use.

Did you see the good news in the paper last week? About the new Sewing Book No. 3, which is now ready for mailing. It contains 32 useful ideas for home decorating; and things to use as gifts, and to sell at bazaars. You will be delighted with it. The price of this new book is only 10 cents postpaid. Send coin with name and address to Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

To Check Constipation Get at Its Cause!

If constipation has you down so you feel heavy, tired and doxy, it's time you did something about it. And something more than just taking a physic! You should get at the cause of the trouble.

If you eat the super-refined food most people eat, the chances are the difficulty is simple—you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean heavy food. It's a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines. If this common form of constipation is your trouble, eat Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast every day and drink plenty of water. All-Bran isn't a medicine—it's a crunchy, toasted, nutritious cereal. And it will help you not only to get regular but to keep regular, day after day. Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. Sold by every grocer.
